THE CITY

Located in Shaanxi Province deep in the heart of China, Xi’an is a traditional Chinese city in the midst of modern development. The capital of China for over 400 years, Xi’an is filled with interesting historical landmarks and artifacts, most famously, the army of terracotta warriors unearthed there. PLACES AROUND TOWN

CITY WALL
One of only two cities in China with city walls that is still intact, Xi’an has restored its wall beautifully. The wall can be strolled or biked to give a birds-eye view of the old city. Also, the park below gives a good view of the wall itself and definitely merits a visit.

TERRACOTTA WARRIORS
By far the most famous attraction in Xi’an, these 8,000 full-sized clay soldiers represent one of the most spectacular accomplishments in history. A museum has been built over the pits where the warriors were excavated and glass floors allow for a close up look at this tribute to Shi Huangdi, the first emperor of China.

NANDAJIE
As western music and the club culture slowly makes its way to Xi’an, Nandajie is the place to go to find it. Most of the clubs in town are located along this street which is also home to a number of restaurants open well past midnight to satisfy your late night cravings.
